Ceramic Floor Tile Classification

C1 - Soft soled footwear or bare feet areas, bathrooms and bedrooms without direct access from the outside

C2 - Living areas of homes but with the exception of kitchens, entrances, and other rooms which may have a lot of traffic

C3 - Residential kitchens, halls, corridors, balconies and terraces

C4 - Regularly used areas, entrances, commercial kitchens, hotel bathrooms

C5 - Heavy pedestrian traffic over sustained periods (eg public areas such as shopping centres and hotel foyers)

FR - This indicates that a tile is frost resistant

Selecting your Tiles

There are several types of tile available and they vary in their technical properties. It is essential you select the correct tile for your situation.

Glazed Ceramic - The obvious choice for walls in bathrooms, kitchens and laundry areas. They come in various sizes from tiny mosaics to as large as a metre. Large tiles make rooms look bigger as there are fewer grout lines. High quality white glazed tiles can be inexpensive and look dramatic teamed with vibrant patterned borders. Glazed floor tiles are beautiful in conservatory floors and reception rooms but are not suitable for outdoor use or heavy traffic areas. They need protecting from grit if they are near an external door.

Unglazed Ceramic - Normally used in commercial and industrial settings and available with slip resistant profiles for wet areas. They are wear, stain and frost resistant. They are robust so are ideal for laundry and utility rooms, bathrooms, playrooms and garages. They withstand heavy foot and light wheeled traffic. Slip resistant tiles have different profiles for bare feet or shoes, the more slip resistant the more difficult to clean.

Porcelain - These are the most popular as they are beautiful and extremely hard wearing with good anti-slip qualities. Similar to unglazed ceramic and often made to look like natural slate stone or wood laminate. There are both porcelain wall and floor tiles and many ranges that are suitable for either. Available glazed or even polished. Many ranges have the same colours in matt and gloss to let you create subtle pattern effects. They are fired at high temperatures so they are frost resistant and can be used inside or out.

Quarry Tile - The traditional cottage kitchen quarry tiles are made from natural clay, some are frost resistant and can be used for floors internally or externally. Their natural clay surface gives good slip resistance and are very hard wearing. They come in rich warm shades of red and brown with a great deal of natural variation in colour. They do not need sealing and over time develop their own rich patina.

Terracotta - These are made from natural clay like quarry tiles but are fired at lower temperatures and vary in water absorbency. They are unsuitable for exterior use in the UK's climate, as they are not frost resistant. Most need sealing prior to and after laying and your supplier will advise on the products to use. These are much lighter than quarry tiles varying from terracotta colour of a plant pot to almost white.

Mosaic - Small pieces of ceramic tile or glass usually sold in sheets on a mesh backing for ease of fixing. You can use these all over a wall or as border tiles. They are very useful for fitting to non square shapes such as purposely curved walls or uneven surfaces.

Natural stone products, Limestone, Marble, Granite, Slate - These vary enormously in wearability. Some are very hard and others quite soft; some may need sealing and can vary in thickness.
